Logger Lore: Fall Traditions at Puget Sound Exhibit Tour

Collins Memorial Library

Join archivists Jane Connelly and Olivia Inglin for a guided tour of Logger Lore: Fall Traditions at Puget Sound, a new exhibit celebrating the back-to-school traditions that build community and camaraderie on campus. Explore the history of Homecoming, discover unique student clubs, celebrate academic excellence, and learn about campus publications from The Trail (our amazing student newspaper!) to alternative newsletters and zines. Featuring rare photographs, artifacts, and documents from the university's Archives, Logger Lore examines how our campus traditions have evolved and aims to inspire Loggers to create the future traditions of Puget Sound. After viewing the exhibit, visitors are invited to join Jane and Olivia for an optional tour of the Archives & Special Collections department to learn how the Archives acquire, preserve, and share the historical records of University of Puget Sound.

1–3 p.m.

Museum of Natural History: Open House

Thompson Hall, Room 295

The Museum has one of the Pacific Northwest's most significant natural history collections, with over 100,000 research specimens. Get a behind-the-scenes look at the collection and learn about how Puget Sound undergraduates get to be involved in the museum.

ONGOING FRIDAY–SATURDAY

War and Passion: Selections from Georges Rouault's "Miserere" in Context

Kittredge Gallery

Between 1914 and 1948, the French artist Georges Rouault produced a monumental series of prints entitled Miserere ("Have Mercy") in response to the horrors of World War I. Combining Christian iconography with frank depictions of wartime cruelty, the darkly expressionistic works were Rouault's attempt to grapple with the reality of the senseless loss and destruction wrought by war and those who wield power. War and Passion: Selections from Georges Rouault's Miserere in Context, co-curated by art history professor Kelsey Eldridge and gallery manager Peter Stanley, places Miserere into conversation with pieces from the University's collection and sculptures by John McCuiston. Together these modern and contemporary works provide an invitation to reflect on the timelessness of Rouault's project and the inhumanity of interminable war.

Visit our self-guided Interactive Tour anytime throughout the weekend to explore our 97-acre residential campus, named one of the 20 "Most Beautiful Campuses in America" by The Princeton Review.
